A training day for school and public library staff to explore policies and practices for raising the profile and appeal of reading for young people aged eleven and over

Expected learning outcomes

- fresh perspectives on the role of the library in encouraging reading
- knowledge of what motivates young people to read, and what demotivates them
- awareness of the implications of current educational strategies and research
- extra strategies for promoting and exploiting the library and its resources
- ideas for exploiting National Year of Reading 2008
- opportunities to share good practice

Course leader

Anne is an independent trainer and lecturer. She specialises in children's and young people's reading and children's and school libraries.
